

Construction Defects

We work with clients to assist with all types of construction defects, including navigating your claim through litigation or arbitration.

The Construction Defect Team at Lyons Law Group is intimately familiar with the various defect-related legal matters. We possess a grounded understanding of construction law and an unwavering commitment to client advocacy. Our expertise protects your investment, and our advocacy leads to a more efficient and safer construction industry for everyone.

Contractors sometimes cut corners and take the cheapest route to get the project done faster and to maximize profit, which is a business practice that produces many construction defects in the final product, if the final product is even completed. Sometimes owners unfairly accuse contractors of negligent work. Lyons Law Group defends both contractors' and owners' rights with respect to construction defect claims.

Construction Defect litigation entails a wide range of efforts, including reviewing existing documents and contracts, engaging experts and conducting inspections of the claimed defects, deposing potential witnesses, and obtaining damage assessments and repair cost estimates. Our attorneys approach each case with attention to detail so that your interests are represented and you are protected properly.

If you are an owner who suspects your property has construction defects or if you are a contractor accused of defective work, it is important to engage an attorney who understands construction and will vigorously protect your rights. Our attorney's understand best industry practices and are zealous advocates for our clients.